Music Company Formally Opens Store Oct. 28th
Party for Public at Gardner Location on Sartori Avenue

The Gardner Music Company is inviting the people of this district to be their guests at the formal opening of their splendid new store at 1325 Sartori avenue. Arrangements are now being made for the personal appearance of well known radio entertainers as well as prominent artists in concert work, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 28, which is the date set for the formal opening.

The new home of the Gardner Music Company occupies the entire large store building next to the First National Bank. For the past two weeks extensive alterations have been under way, and while the company is now doing business in its new store, the formal opening will not be held until next week.

About a year ago Mr. and Mrs. T. Gardner and their son, Milton Gardner, who are the owners of the Gardner Music Company, decided to open a music store in Torrance, to serve as a branch to their parent house in Gardena. But the branch store in Torrance soon became a rival of the parent house and it became necessary to seek larger quarters to serve the growing business in the Torrance-Lomita district. As a result the fine large store building in the First National Bank block was secured.

The new home of the Gardner Music Company will enable the company to carry a complete line of "everything musical," which is the company's slogan. In the Torrance store there can now be seen the famous Gulbransen pianos and player pianos, Brunswick phonographs and radio combinations, Fada and Radio Corporation of America radios and supplies, Buscher hand instruments, Q. R. S. string rolls, and a full line of all string instruments and sheet music.

One of the most noteworthy additions to the stock in the Torrance store is the collection of over 1500 pieces of classical sheet music. This collection will be kept complete at all times and will be found very convenient for teachers, soloists, or orchestra leaders, when in need of any of the celebrated compositions.

Wando Stanford, who has been in charge of the branch store in Torrance, will also be the manager of the new store. Ray Tomkins' Oriole Orchestra has been engaged for the opening night, Oct. 28, and will assist the radio entertainers and other musical artists in the program from 8 to 10 p. m.

"We wish to extend a most hearty invitation to everyone in the district to come and enjoy the music and see our new home on Wednesday evening," said Milton Gardner. "This opening night concert is given in appreciation for the splendid support that the people in the Torrance-Lomita district have given us." Mr. Gardner continued, "and we want you all to be present at our housewarming."

Anniversary of Aid Society Is Observed Here
Torrance Methodist Women Enjoy Function Tuesday at Church

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church celebrated their fourth anniversary Tuesday with a delicious three-course luncheon. The tables were beautifully decorated, the color scheme being carried out with yellow chrysanthemums. A huge yellow and white birthday cake with four candles in large rose holders was the center of attraction at the speakers' table.

Rose favors indicated places for the five past presidents, Mrs. Frank Warren, Mrs. Sara Campbell, Mrs. William Crighton, Mrs. E. N. Tomkins, and Miss Mary Spoon; the presiding officer, Mrs. Guy Mowrey; and the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Vandewater of Long Beach.

have a home of our own in the near future. He has no bad habits whatever, does not use tobacco or drink, and always spends his evenings at home. He is loving in every way but one, which is this—he does not think I help him enough. If I am to blame please have mercy on me as we are very unhappy. If I have never been strong since childhood (I weigh 94 pounds) and I would give all the world to be like my husband's mother. It seems she has worked very hard all her life, has raised a large family and good woman. We live on a large farm, and being unable to afford hired help, my husband works early and late. I help milk twice a day, do all my housework, care for my garden, and when my husband has work in the field which I can do with our baby with me, I am always willing. There are days when I am not as well as others. Then my housework lags and somehow I do not get the chores started at the usual time. My husband insists I should neglect my housework for the outside. Should I? He always notices and remarks about other neat housekeepers, who have nothing but their housework to do, and so I dislike to leave my housework undone. I save all I possibly can in every way. He hasn't had to buy hardly anything in clothes for myself or baby, because my mother and his mother buy what we need. I have a very bad temper which I have learned to control a great deal. But when he continues each day to find fault because I do not do more, I become discouraged and lose my temper. I am always sorry afterward, but since our quarrel yesterday, I feel so blue and so I am coming to you. I must say that my husband is in poor health, too, having been run over when very young. MRS. E. R.

Neither you nor your husband really is to blame. Because, in his ill-health, he is able to drive himself on and on, never lagging, he thinks you are able to do the same. And you, forgetful that toil saps the spirit as well as the strength, causing him to be irritable and critical when he comes in from the fields, do not try as much as you might to avert these quarrels. I have no doubt that your husband loves you, and I am confident that at times when he is rested and cheerful he does not criticize. It seems to me that you are helping as much as you can physically. I think that it would be a good idea for you to tell his mother in the matter. Tell her frankly what is causing trouble between you. Don't ask her to speak to him about it directly, but to quietly try to make him understand that some women are stronger than others. Let him feel, through her, that you are holding up your end of the burden. She can help you more in this way than any one else, because it is evident that her great capacity for work, and her goodness, has indirectly led him to think the same thing of you. But don't worry, and accept such criticisms as a part of married life, and remember that what a husband likes better than anything else is a cheerful wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Thompson planned to leave Gull Lake, Saskatchewan, Oct. 20, but letters received by relatives here state that they've been snowed in, and their return will probably be delayed.
